A) Teams

The Competition is open to recognised Law Colleges and Law Faculties around the world. The participation is limited to (under) graduate Law students only. Students holding a LLM or other advanced degree in law (SJD, etc.) and correspondent courses are excluded from participation.

Teams from universities worldwide will compete in the competition. Each team shall consist of three students. Two additional students are permitted by the organisers if they are associated with the team as researchers. The inter-change of speaker-researcher status among team members may not be allowed once the team has registered and confirmed the status of individual team members (5 Jan 2011). Each team will be accompanied by one or two academic coaches, which brings the total to 4-7 persons per team.

Coaches are allowed to give general instruction and information (i.e., general lecture on international criminal law); however, they are not allowed to give any instruction or information specific to the problem (i.e., there cannot be any assistance on the memorials). Once the memorials have been submitted, coaches may help students work on their oral presentation; again, they should leave the analysis of the problem to the students.
