Credit Allocation

The ABA and New York Court of Appeals rules limit the number of non-classroom credits, including field placement credits that may be applied to the 88 credits required for graduation. Of the 88 credits required for the JD degree, no more than 24 may be non-classroom credits. See Rule 4C of the Academic Rules and Regulations (<https://law.pace.edu/sites/default/files/academics/AcademicRegulations.pdf>). The credit allocation for each externship is divided between field placement credits awarded for field work and academic credits awarded for the classroom seminar component. All credits awarded for client representation clinics (both the clinical and academic portions) are considered “academic” credits. All clinics and externships are graded.

Time Commitments

Client representation clinics: You will need to spend an average of 4 hours a week per clinical credit, in addition to the seminar, for Clinic work. You should expect periods of intense peak activity to alternate with inactive periods. Some weeks the program will require much less time, and others much more. The key is to keep open at least some days each week when you can devote most or all of your time to the clinical program.

Externships: While the externship program seminars generally meet in the late afternoon or evening, students must be able to work during the day at the externship sites. All the externships require work at least 12 hours per week away from the Law School, except for the Family Court Externship, which requires 8 hours (one full day, in Westchester County Family Court). The Corporate Law Externship, Honors Prosecution Externship, and U.N. Environmental Diplomacy Practicum require 2 full days (16 hours) at your placement.

A lawyer’s obligations, like a doctor’s, do not disappear on weekends and over holidays. STUDENTS IN CLIENT REPRESENTATION CLINICS AND EXTERNSHIPS MUST BE PREPARED TO CONTINUE HANDLING THEIR RESPONSIBILITIES THROUGHOUT EXAM AND BREAK PERIODS. The faculty will help you plan to minimize these conflicts, but it still may happen that a court appearance will cause you to miss a class or that a crucial meeting with an adversary will occur during a break.

Travel and Expenses

Externships by definition require time spent away from the law school. Some placements are nearby; others may involve significant travel. JJLS has limited funds to help defray travel expenses. JD students in Externships will be reimbursed a maximum of $250 for travel during the semester. Please read the externship travel expense policy. Be sure to discuss any concerns you have about the location of your placement site with the faculty member during the application process.

Eligibility and Prerequisites

Unless otherwise stated, second-, third-, and fourth-year students in good academic standing may apply for any of the programs. Preference will usually be given to students in their final year of law school (third-year full-time and fourth-year part-time students).

You may apply for up to three programs and must rank your preferences on the application form. Students will only be permitted to enroll in one JJLS program each semester. While we aim to honor students' preferences, case load and class size considerations may result in your being admitted to your second or third choice. If you decline an offered position, you will be permitted to enroll in another program only if all qualified students who applied in a timely way have been accommodated. Do not assume that you will be able to get credit for an externship if you have not applied in a timely way, even if you secure your own placement.

Please read course descriptions carefully and make sure that you have satisfied any necessary course prerequisites or requested a waiver on your application.

All participants in JJLS client representation clinics and externship programs must avoid conflicts of interest based on past or concurrent employment (or volunteer work) situations. If you have questions about a potential conflict, please consult the Executive Director of John Jay Legal Services.
